Stranden

Mødet mellem land og hav har altid fascineret os mennesker.

De fleste steder markerer stranden en naturlig grænse mellem lande. Langt derude bag horisonten bor der andre folkeslag. Med andre vaner, kulturer og sprog end vi. Men måske med de samme drømme?

Drømme om en planet, hvor mennesket er i balance med naturen. Drømme om, at en afstumpet ødelæggelse af vores fælles livsgrundlag, fortrænges af et fælles brændende ønske om at bevare fauna og flora omkring os.

Fællesskab om at stoppe menneskehedens ødelæggelse af klimabalancer. Fællesskab om at stoppe vold og krig.

Afstumpet? Er det ikke et voldsomt ord at benytte i denne sammenhæng? Det kan vi så tænke over, når vi næste gang går tur på stranden og bliver overhalet af biler og motorcykler, der kører ræs på den smukke sandstrand.

The beach

The meeting of land and sea has always fascinated us humans.

In most places, the beach marks a natural border between countries. Far out behind the horizon other people live. With different habits, cultures and languages than we. But maybe with the same dreams?

Dreams of a planet, where man is in balance with nature.
Dreams, that a callous destruction of our common livelihoods is displaced by a common ardent wish to preserve the fauna and flora around us.

Community to stop humanity's destruction of the climate balances. Community to stop violence and war.

Callous? Is that too harsh a word to use in this context? We can think about this, when we next time go for a walk on the beach and are overtaken by cars and motorcycles racing on the beautiful sandy beach.
