Det stolte, stejle bjerg strækker sig langt op over skyerne. Kun med ganske korte mellemrum tillader skyerne adgang til den blå himmel deroppe.

Den lille dal ligger ensomt hen. Det regner ikke, men skyernes våde luft dækker hud og hår med et fint lag af vanddråber. Alt er vådt som efter dages regn. Der, hvor der ikke er klippegrund, synker støvlen ned i den tunge, klistrede ler.

Jeg sætter mig på et stykke klippe. Her er så stille, at jeg kan høre mit eget åndedrag.

Lidt efter lidt dukker flere lyde op. Langt borte er det elven, der danner en fos ned ad en stejl klippe. Nogle små vindpust får pilekrattet til at rasle.

Et sted tættere ved søen dukker den behagelige lyd af rindende vand op. En lille bæk munder ud i søen.

Søerne under det majestætiske bjerg står blanke som spejle i kontrast mod de gølge klipper og den lave, brune vegetation. Vandet er så rent, at de rustfarvede klippestykker i søens bund kan ses med det blotte øje.

Alt er prydet med efterårets farver. Kun nogle padderokker ude i den spejlblanke sø har bevaret noget af deres grønne farve.

The proud, steep mountain reaches far above the clouds. Only at short intervals do the clouds allow access to the blue sky up there.

The little valley is a lonely place. It does not rain, but the humid air of the clouds covers the skin and hair with a fine layer of water drops. As after days of rain everything is wet. Outside the rocky ground, the boot sinks into the heavy, sticky clay.

I sit down on a piece of rock. It is so quiet. I can hear my own breath.

After a while, more sounds appear. Far away, it is the river which forms a fall down a crag.

Some little gusts of wind make the willow scrub rattle.

Somewhere closer to the lake, the pleasant sound of running water appear. A small stream flows into the lake.

The lakes beneath the majestic mountain stand glassy in contrast against the barren rocks and the low, brown vegetation. The water is so clean, that the rust-coloured rocks at the bottom of the lake can be seen with the naked eye.

Everything is graced with the autumn colours. Only some horsetails in the glassy lake have retained some of their green colour.
