Den frostne vildmark

November i Sydgrønland. Den enorme, øde vildmark er gået i vinterhi. Bjerge og dale er dækket af sne og is. Der har også dannet sig is på nogle af de dybe fjorde.

Solen har ikke megen magt på dette sted på denne tid af året. Selv midt på dagen står solen lavt i horisonten. De sneklædte bjerge danner lange skygger i den blege vintersol.

Selv i dette vinterlige lys kan Sydgrønlands smukke landskaber ikke skjules. I den klare frostluft kan man se milevidt.

Den frostblå farve dominerer i de øde, kolde vinterbjerge. Alt ligger stille hen. For dyr og planter er dette den yderste tid på denne planet.

Alligevel ved vi, at derude et sted skjuler vinterharen sig i sin hvide dragt, og nede under sne og is er en plante klar til en ny begyndelse, når solen og varmen kommer triumferende tilbage.

The frozen wilderness

November in South Greenland. The vast, desolate wilderness has gone into winter cover. The mountains and the valleys are covered with snow and ice. Ice has also formed on some of the deep fjords.

At this time of year in this place the sun does not have much power. Even in the middle of the day, the sun is low on the horizon. The snow-capped mountains form long shadows in the pale winter sun.

Even in this wintry light, South Greenland's beautiful landscapes cannot be hidden. In the clear frosty air, you can see for miles around.

The frosty blue colour dominates in the desolate, cold winter mountains. Everything is at a standstill. For animals and plants, this is the last time on this planet.

Yet we know that somewhere out there the winter hare hides in its white suit, and down under the snow and ice, a plant is ready to a new beginning when the sun and heat triumphantly run.
