

EFTERÅRETS FUGLE
THE BIRDS IN THE AUTUMN

Efterårets fugle

Forleden tog jeg et par timer ud af min travle hverdag for at betragte og fotografere efterårets fugle i træet ved mit fuglebræt.

Oplevelsen af havens fugle glæder mig altid. Min have er lokaliseret lige op af skoven og i udkanten af landsbyen. Så det vrimer med fuglearter omkring huset.

De seneste dages blæst har revet de fleste af tjørnens blade løs, så fuglene kan ikke længere gemme sig i det grønne løv.

I løbet af en time fik jeg fotograferet bogfinke, spætmejse, musvit, sumpmejse, topmejse, rødhals, stor flagspætte, solsort, skovspurv og grønirisk. Spurvehøgen kom igen susende. Den forfejlede sit angreb, og jeg nåede ikke at få fotograferet havens rovfugl.

I dag prøvede jeg igen. Det er aldrig til at vide, hvad der kommer forbi. Jeg fik denne gang fotograferet blåmejsen, bogfinken, og så kom det røde egern også lige forbi.

The birds in the autumn

The other day, I took a couple of hours out of my busy day to observe and photograph the autumn birds in the tree by my bird feeder.

The experience of the garden's birds always brings me joy. My garden is next to the forest and at the edge of the village. So, the area around the house is teeming with bird species.

The recent days' winds have blown off most of the hawthorn's leaves, so the birds can no longer hide in the green foliage.

Over an hour, I managed to photograph chaffinches, nuthatches, great tits, marsh tits, crested tits, robins, greater spotted woodpeckers, blackbirds, tree sparrows, and greenfinches. The sparrowhawk came rushing again. It missed its attack, and I did not manage to photograph the garden's bird of prey.

Today, I tried again. You never know what might come by. This time, I managed to photograph the blue tit, the chaffinch, and even spotted the red squirrel passing by.
